Forbearance Request

If your financial difficulties prevent you from making timely payments on your student loans(s), you may be eligible for an Economic Hardship Forbearance. To qualify for this forbearance, you must request forbearance and provide documentation that you meet at least one of the following eligibility criteria:

- You have been granted an economic hardship deferment under the Federal Family Education Loan Program (FFELP), the Federal Direct Loan Program (FDLP), or the Federal Perkins Loan Program for the same period of time for which you are requesting an economic hardship deferment for your Loan.
- You are receiving payment under a federal or state public assistance program, such as Aid to Families with Dependent Children, Supplemental Social Security Income, Food Stamps, or state general public assistance.
- You and all co-signers have a medical condition that necessitates an extended leave of absence from work and can demonstrate that you do not have the assets to make payments on time.

Economic Hardship Forbearance may be granted based on income and family size.

Forbearance is granted at the note holder's discretion for a few months as an alternative to regular monthly payments.

The Forbearance begins on the date the eligible condition first existed, as determined by the loan holder. The forbearance ends on the date the eligible condition ends. This forbearance may be granted based on the lender's discretion. However, any negative reports that were submitted to credit bureaus will not be removed if the forbearance is granted retroactively. You must continue making your regular monthly payments until the forbearance is approved. You will receive written notice of the approval or denial of this request, after it has been processed.

During the hardship forbearance period, principal and interest payments are deferred, and the interest that accrues during the period may be capitalized at the expiration of the hardship forbearance.
